Course Description:

Purpose: This course is an opportunity for students conducting original research, generally their doctoral dissertation, to gain experience in the oral presentation of their scholarship and receive constructive feedback.

Student eligibility: Students must be advanced to doctoral candidacy or advancing to candidacy within the timeframe of the course.

Requirements: Each student will be scheduled to present his or her doctoral research to the class. It is recommended that the presenter use PowerPoint and also provide a handout for each member of the class. The student who is presenting is responsible for obtaining the appropriate equipment from the Office of Instructional Technology for their presentation if it is not already available in the classroom.

Presentations should be planned for around 20-30 minutes, with 10-20 minutes for additional "Q & A" and class feedback. Each presentation should provide the following: brief background on the theoretical and empirical bases for the research; the research questions; the methods proposed or used; expected or actual results; and significance or implications. (see recommendations on Canvas)

One presentation per class will be scheduled. Class members should assume an active role during presentations and are expected to provide written feedback to the presenter at the end of class. (Response form on Canvas)

Evaluation: CR/NCR. CR is based on attendance, class participation and completion of the requisite number of evaluation forms. Students should complete a presentation evaluation form for each class/presentation attended.

Absence policy: After the first class day, two absences are permitted with no penalty.

Other matters: If you have a condition that will require accommodation, please let me know by the second week of class.
